Adam Adler earned his bachelor's degree from CUNY Queens College. Mr. Adler graduated from the South Texas School of Law and was admitted to the Texas bar in 2017. In 2022, Adam was admitted to the New York bar.

Prior to joining Derrevere Stevens Black & Cozad, Mr. Adler served as in-house counsel for Allstate, Chubb, and GEICO. In those roles, Adam engaged in the defense of civil litigation, including claims for personal injury, property damage, and the prosecution of claims for subrogated interests in both Texas and New York. Mr. Adler represented the insurer as a corporation and the insured customers in thousands of claims. Mr. Adler was recently recognized for the highest accumulation of subrogation recovery nationwide for Allstate Insurance in 2022 with over $4 million recovered. Mr. Adler has extensive experience litigating cases and has performed litigation case management including mediations, arbitration, depositions, examinations under oath, handling various motion practices and hearings, and conducting general trial preparation and trial performance. He has taken more than a dozen cases to jury verdict, with positive results for his clients. His diverse skill sets, and experience enable him to form profound connections while affecting the best promising outcome through his service as a trusted advocate and guardian of his clients' interests.

During his leisure time, Adam enjoys traveling abroad, skiing, acroyoga, soccer, dodgeball, and preparing for his next runner's marathon.
